Congratulations on your pregnancy!

Now, let's get started on your journey.

Booking Your Appointment

- Visit our website to schedule your appointment for either a confirmation of pregnancy or a first trimester screen (between 11 - 13 weeks) or a second trimester scan (18 - 22 weeks).
- If you visited us for a confirmation of pregnancy, we'll automatically schedule these appointments for you based on your gestational stage.

Appointment Confirmation

- Our friendly reception team will reach out to confirm your appointment.
- You'll receive a courtesy call the day before your appointment to remind you.

First Trimester Screen

- If you're coming in for a first trimester screen: - Start at Lancet in Building A to have your blood drawn.
- Collect a pre-filled blood form from reception or go directly to Lancet where your forms will be waiting.

- Proceed to the Fetal Center in Building B for your consultation with the doctor.

Blood Work Processing

- Lancet will process your blood work while you make your way to our consultation rooms in Building B.

Consultation and Scan

- Your doctor will conduct your consultation and scan.
- Your blood test results will be ready and delivered to your doctor promptly to avoid any wait times.

Follow-Up Appointments

- For follow-up appointments or second trimester scans, head straight to the Fetal Center in Building B.
- Your doctor will see you for your consultation.
- If needed, we'll provide a referral to an Obstetrician for delivery and further pregnancy management.

Our Ultrasound Scans

Viability Scan 6-10 Weeks

The viability scan is a pregnancy scan that is usually carried out at 6-10 weeks of pregnancy. This is the first scan performed during the pregnancy and is sometimes also called the "dating scan".

Nuchal Scan 11-13 Weeks

This ultrasound scan is carried out from 11 weeks + 3 days to 13 weeks + 6 days. The scan is usually performed transabdominally but in a few cases it may be necessary to do the examination transvaginally.

Anomaly Scan 20 Weeks

An anomaly scan takes a close look at your baby and your womb (uterus) at about 20 weeks of pregnancy.

Cardiac Scan On-Going

During the nuchal scan (11-13 weeks), the anomaly scan (20-24 weeks) and wellbeing scan (30-34 weeks) we routinely examine the fetal heart and connecting blood vessels.

Cervical Scan 14 - 37 Weeks

This is a transvaginal scan to measure the length of the cervix. (14-37 weeks.)

Multiple Pregnancy

Multiple pregnancy, in the context of fetal medicine, refers to a pregnancy where more than one fetus is developing in the womb.
